San Francisco's Young Champion Who Ap-pears For Charitable Furposes.

There was one amateur performer at the society circus recently given in this city who won applause galore. He was a mere boy in years, size and looks, but such was his proficiency and so apparent his nerve that his work compared favorably with that of his older companions and in some instances even excelled it. The boy was Walter Hogg, the 15-yearold son of Albert Hogg, a well known druggist. He lives with his parents at 227 Leavenworth street. He is a manly yet modest boy and is now considered the champion all around juvenile athlete of the Olympic club. He has appeared in public, at charitable benefits only, on numerous occasions, always winning special notice, and is looked upon by his club as a regular 'standby" for ladies' nights and special exhi-

Walter's father prefaced the boy's story of his training and achievements by saying: "At 7 Walter was delicate and rather undersized for his age, and I was somewhat werried about him. He was in perfect health, but delicate, and I began to look for something to build him up and give him a solid foundation for later years. I determined to try athletics.

At all the exhibitions given by the club Master Hogg appears as a wrestler, if nothing else, and so far he stands undefeated in his class.

An amusing thing occurred when the Olympic club grounds were opened. There was an audience of about 7,000 people, and Master Hogg was scheduled for a boxing match with a classmate. The two boys, both about 0 years of age, had each been claiming supremacy and had quietly agreed to decide the question when they boxed at the opening. The gloves were donned, and the referea called time. The baby boxers went at it in vain. Married by a Woman Minister.

While Rev. Anna Shaw was speaking in New York last fall she was listened to with great delight by many, and espocially by a young German lady, who declared she would certainly have only a when she came to be married. But learning that Dr. Shaw was in Mansas and would not be likely to return to the east at the time desired she looked about for another ordiffied woman. Through Mrs. Blake probably she discovered that Rev. Phebe A. Hanaford was residing at 336 West Fifty-first street, New York, and sought her assistance. The result was that on July 21, 1894, Mr. Carl Ernst Theodore Strunck and Miss Christiana Louise Volkens were united in marriage by Rev. Mrs. Hanatord, and on Aug. 4, 1894, the bride's sister came to the same parlor, and Mr. Armin Bruno Carl David Eichler was married to Mrs. Johanna Cath-

French Widows.

As widows, Frenchwomen are generally invested with the acting supremacy of their families. "A French widow," writes Max O'Rell, "remains the head of her family; but an English widow becomes a downger. She abdicates in favor of her eldest son. She has rarely been initiated into the affairs of her husband, and it seems quite natural over the headship.

Cella Thaxter. Mrs. Celia Thaxter, as any reader of "An Island Garden" would know, is a true enthusiast in her love of nature, To a visitor recently to her lovely island home at the isles of Shoals she confessed that she was often in her beloved garden as early as 3 o'clock in the morning. The garden is further described as iresistible in its wealth of leveliness. On the right were the larkspurs and day lilies, a radiance of "white and gold and nzure." There, too, were beds of brilliant poppics, and everywhere was a mass of fragrant bloom. Among the novelties of the garden were the water lilies growing in large tubs, the pink Cape Cod lily, the Egyptian lotus, and for blood. He who shall continue much longer to leave woman out as a co-operative factor in government may as well, for consistency's sake, unrivet all his shears, consigning one blade to the garret and the other to the cellar, on the plea that each should be "kept in its own sphere."
